PREFACE.

There are many men of mark and distinction in the dental profession. This book is the first attempt at telling who they are and where they are. By far the greater part of the material published in this work had been furnished individually by the gentlemen whose life sketches here appear. The greater number of these sketches are printed in this book for the first time. It is expected that editions of the work will appear triennially hereafter, with the exception of the second or next coming edition which will appear in an enlarged form in the fall of nineteen sixteen.

The editor desires to express his gratitude and indebtedness to Doctor Burton Lee Thorpe of Saint Louis, the famous dental historian, for valuable services rendered in the preparation of this book.

THE EDITOR.

ROBIN ADAIR. Born in Gainesville, Georgia, February 27, 1878. He is a graduate of High School, of the Georgia State University, B. S. 1899, of the Southern Dental College, D. D. S. 1902, and of Emory College, Medical Department, M. D. 1903.—He was elected an honorary member of the Georgia State Dental Society at the age of eight, in recognition of his early interest in dentistry. He is given the credit as being the first dentist in the South to advocate and establish the dental nurse. He is a frequent clinician, and has read numerous papers in many states. He is the author of the book "Practical Oral Hygiene, Prophylaxis and Pyorrhea Alveolaris." He has collected a large dental library, containing complete bound files of all leading dental journals. In connection with this library is an interesting dental museum. He is a member of many of the leading dental and medical societies. —ADDRESS: Grant Building, Atlanta, Georgia.

SAMUEL A. ALLEN. Born in Council Bluffs, Iowa, December, 5, 1881. Received his early education in the common schools and night schools of his native city, and from borrowed books of the public library. He was graduated from the Northwestern University Dental School of Chicago in 1905, receiving the degree of D. D. S. He is now editor of the "Nebraska Dental Journal," and member of the Board of Nebraska Dental Examiners.—ADDRESS: Loup City, Iowa.

SAMUEL WILLIAM ALLEN. Born in Superior, Nebraska, January 4, 1882. Educated in Canadian public schools, Grove City Public School and Grove City College. Graduated from the Western Reserve University, Cleveland, Ohio, in 1908 with the degree of D. D. S. He was Professor of Anesthesia and Extracting for six years, and Professor of Dental Ceramics for six years, and since two years he is Professor of Clinical Materia Medica at the Western Reserve University, Dental School.—Member: Cleveland Dental Society, Northern Ohio Dental Society, Ohio State Dental Society, National Dental Association, National Institute of Dental Teachers, Wilsonian

Dental Society. He is the inventor of a foot control for dental engines, gold plugger points, and an inlay casting machine.—ADDRESS: 10509 Euclid Ave., Cleveland, Ohio.

ROBERT ROLLINS ANDREWS. Born in Boston, Massachusetts, August 7, 1844. Educated in the common schools. He learned dentistry with his uncle, Dr. R. L. Robbins, of Boston, during the age of 14 and 21. He was graduated with the degree of D. D. S., from the Boston Dental College in 1875, paying his college fees the last year by demonstrating dental embryology to his classmates. After graduation he was made Professor of Dental Histology and taught for seven years. In 1892 he received the honorary degree of A. M., from Dartmouth College in recognition of his research work in dental embryology. He has written numerous papers on dental embroyology, the most important of which was "Enamel, and the Minute Processes Taking Place During Its Development," read at the International Medical Congress, Berlin, 1890, to which he was honorary secretary from America. He wrote the chapter on "Embryology of the Dental Tissues" for Kirk's "American Text-Book of Operative Dentistry," also a chapter for the "Annual of the Universal Medical Sciences," 1888. He was elected a Fellow of the Royal Microscopical Society of Great Britain in 1895. He served as President of the Massachusetts State Dental Society, Connecticut Valley Dental Society, and American Academy of Dental Science. Boston, 1896. In 1893 he was appointed a member of the Massachusetts Board of Registration in Dentistry. In 1899 he was elected a trustee of Tufts Dental College. He is an honorary member of the New York Odontological Society. Honorary chairman of the Section of Oral and Dental Surgery, Pan-American Medical Congress, 1892; chairman of the Committee on Microscopy and Bacteriology, World's Columbian Dental Congress, Chicago, 1892. He is the inventor of a mallet for condensing gold in filling teeth. He has occasionally turned to dramatic writing, having written about half a dozen short plays. He is fond of music and has written a number of poems. ADDRESS: 1306 Mass. Ave., Cambridge, Mass.

LOUIS E. BAKE. Born in Warren County, Illinois, October 14, 1871. Educated in the public and high schools, Red Oak, Iowa. Graduated from the University of Illinois, College of Dentistry, in 1902 with the degree of D. D. S. He is Assistant Professor of Operative Dentistry and Porcelain Art in the University of Illinois, College of Dentistry. HENRY ALBERT BAKER. Born November 27, 1848, at Newport, New Hampshire. Began the practice of dentistry in 1873, later came to Boston and was graduated from the Boston Dental College in 1879, receiving the degree of D. D. S. Received the first prize in the senior year. Became Demonstrator in Operative Dentistry at the Boston Dental College shortly after his graduation. From 1880 until 1887 he was lecturer on oral deformities in the same institution and during the past two years he has given special lectures in the dental department of Tufts College. In 1872 he invented the pneumatic mallet by a curious accident. He happened to have in his hands a tube such as boys use for bean-blowers. At the same time he had in his mouth a round piece of candy which dissolved rapidly. He playfully put one end of the tube between his lips and accidently the candy slipped into the tube. He covered the lower end of the tube with his finger to prevent it from dropping. As soon as he felt it touch his finger, he sucked the candy back, and to his surprise it flew up the tube with such force that he thought he had fractured one of his front teeth. He lay awake nearly all the following night trying to evolve a plan to utilize the force so peculiarly revealed to him. The next morning he was at the machine-shop bright and early and within three days he had the pneumatic mallet complete.—In 1881 he invented an artificial palate for correcting imperfect speech. In 1893 he invented an orthodontic appliance for correcting protruding and retruding mandibles, which is known as the "Baker Anchorage." In 1887 he contributed a chapter on "Obturators and Artificial Vela" to the American System of Dentistry. He is a member of the American Academy of Dental Science, an honorary member of the American Society of Orthodontists, honorary member of the Vermont State Dental Society, and of the New Hampshire State Dental Society. ADDRESS: 419 Boylston St., Boston, Mass.

CORYDON PALMER. Born in Warren, Ohio, in 1820. Educated in his native village. He received the honorary degree of D. D. S. from the Ohio College of Dental Surgery. He is probably the oldest living dentist in the world. For many years he enjoyed a reputation as one of the most eminently skilled gold operators in the dental profession. Having learned the jeweler's trade he became an adept in making his own instruments. It is stated that if he wanted a special instrument for a case in hand he would leave his patient in the chair and go into the laboratory and make it. He was of an inventive turn, and, it is claimed, invented the first complete set of cohesive gold instruments. Many forms in use to-day are patterned after his designs. He was for a number of years an advisory expert, to examine and perfect the new instruments placed on the market by the S. S. White Dental Manufacturing Company. There is a fine collection of his work in oil, illustrating prosthetics, at the Baltimore College of Dental Surgery. For years he has been a member of the Board of Trustees and was at one time a teacher of operative dentistry in the Ohio College of Dental Surgery. He has practiced dentistry in his native town throughout his life, where he is now retired.—ADDRESS: Warren, Ohio.

WILLIAM HERBERT TAGGART. Born in Freeport, Illinois, March 23, 1855. Educated in the Freeport public schools. At the age of twelve he received a diploma from the County Fair Association at Freeport for the best piece of mechanism invented by a boy under sixteen years of age. His production was a complete steam engine patterned after a large one in a reaper factory. In 1873 he was employed in a dental office for board and lodging in Chicago. The first night after his engagement, while sleeping in the office, a patient suffering with toothache, in search of a dentist, woke him and he succesfully performed his first operation, much to the surprise of himself and his employer next morning. In 1878 he was graduated from the Philadelphia Dental College with the degree of D. D. S. After sixteen years of successful practice at Freeport, he removed to Chicago in 1892 and entered upon general practice, specializing in porcelain art. His greatest work is that of the invention of the cast gold inlay in 1907. Many infringements on the rights of his invention have since occurred, against which he has brought several actions. A suit against a Chicago practitioner is still pending. Proofs are given that his method of casting had been used as early as 1896. He was President of the Illinois State Dental Society in 1890, and the first President of the Chicago Dental Society after its amalgamation with the Chicago Odontographic Society. He is an honorary member of the Odontological Society of New York City, the Second District Society of New York, and the Missouri State Dental Association. EUGENE SOLOMON TALBOT. Born in Sharon, Massachusetts, March 8, 1847. He is the descendant of an old English family resident in the United States for more than two centuries. He received a public school education, followed by academic training at Stoughtonham Institute, until the age of sixteen years. He learned mechanics and at the age of nineteen became a master mechanic taking charge of the machinery of a Cuban sugar plantation. He was graduated from the Pennsylvania College of Dental Surgery in 1872 with the degree of D. D. S., and from the Rush Medical College in 1880 with the degree of M .D. He was in the belief that dentistry should occupy the plane it deserved as a specialty of medicine and, therefore, in 1831, secured three radical changes in the medical relations of dental surgery: Chairs on Dental and Oral Surgery were established in the five medical colleges of Chicago: the Section of Stomatology was created in the American Medical Association; the Chicago Dental Infirmary was established whereby the students were enabled to take a regular medical course of instruction, to have special dental instruction in the infirmary, and to be graduated in medicine. In 1881 he was elected Professor of Dental Surgery in the Chicago Medical College and in the Woman's Medical College, and Lecturer on Dental Pathology and Surgery in the Rush Medical College, when he accepted the latter two only.

He was a delegate to the Seventh International Medical Congress, London, 1881, and to the Ninth International Medical Congress, Washington, 1887. He was Honorary President of the Tenth International Medical Congress, Berlin, 1890, and of the Twelfth International Medical Congress, Moscow ,1897. Member of the Thirteenth International Medical Congress, Paris, 1900. Secretary of the Section on Dental and Buccal Surgery at the Pan-American Medical Congress, Havana, Clark Dental Congress, Portland, 1905. He was elected Fellow of the Chicago Academy of Medicine in 1892, also a member of the Chicago Academy of Sciences. He was elected an honorary member of the Odontologisches Gesellschaft of Berlin, Germany; the Association Generale des Dentistes de France of Paris, France; and Sociedad Odontological Espanola of Madrid, Spain. In 1901 he was elected corresponding member of the Dansk-Tandlaegerforening, and in 1904 honorary member of the Stomatology Society of Hungary. In 1907 he was made Vice-President of the American Medical Association; and in the same year a member of the First Congress of Stomatology, Paris; also Honorary President of the International Congress of Stomatology. He has been Secretary of the Section on Stomatology of the American Medical Association (of which he was one of the founders) for more than twenty years. He was Secretary of the Dental and Oral Section of the Pan-American Medical Congress, Washington, 1893, and a member of the World's Columbian Dental Congress, Chicago, 1893. He is now a member of the Chicago Medical Society, the Illinois State Medical Society, and the American Medical Association. In recognition of his work he received the honorary degrees of M. S. and LL. D. He is one of the most prolific writers, having published over one hundred papers, all the result of original research and investigation. He has devised several useful appliances in dentistry. Among these are a screw post for crowning roots, a three-cornered pulp canal reamer, a hot-air apparatus for making celluloid plates, a number of appliances for regulating teeth, and combinations of drugs used in the treatment of teeth.—ADDRESS: 31 North State St., Chicago, Ill.

GORDON WHITE. Born in Pulaski, Giles County, Tennessee. Eduacted at Giles Military College. His father, Dr. Thomas Cathy White, a prominent physician and surgeon, had, while at college, given study also to Dental Surgery and later carved out of wood four models of individual forceps which were made by Frank Arnold and Sons about 1847, and were possibly the first individual forceps used by the profession. Realizing the great need of scientific and skillful dentistry the father desired his eldest child to prepare himself to practice Dental Surgery, so from the time of the father's death, when the boy was eleven years of age, his education was directed to that end. His professional training, begun by private preceptors, was completed by the full course at Old Baltimore College where he won the largest vote of the Faculty on his graduation in 1879. Notwithstanding his youth he was offered a position in the College. Declining this offer, he located at Nashville, Tennessee, where he has been in active practice ever since. His professional activities have perhaps been most manifest in the treatment of Pyorrhea Alveolairs and Orthodontia. He became President of the Tennessee State Dental Association in 1889. In 1892

he was made President of the Southern Dental Association. In 1900 he was the Southern representative from the National Dental Association, appointed by the U. S. Government to the Medical and Dental Congress at Paris, France; and in 1902, he was a delegate from the National Dental Association to the International Congress at Stockholm, Sweden. In 1904 the International Dental Federation made him a delegate to the International Dental Congress at St. Louis, and he was also one of the Honorary Presidents of that Congress. He is a member of the following organizations: Sigma Delta Fraternity, Nashville Society of Dental Surgery, Nashville Academy of Medicine, Tennessee State Medical Association, American Dental Association, American Medical Association, First District Dental Society of New York, and Honorary Member of the American Dental Society of Europe. He has read papers before the Dental and Medical Associations, and has given a number of lectures at college, though he has never been connected with any teaching institution. A number of little instruments invented by him are in use by the profession. His writing has been confined to the papers read before the various associations. ADDRESS: 610½ Church St., Nashville, Tenn.

WILLIAM A. WHITE. Born in Albany, N. Y., September 14, 1857. He never attended school, excepting four winters in the village school of Redwood, Jefferson Co., N. Y. Member: Indiana State Dental Society, National Dental Association, Indianapolis Dental Society, Western Indiana Dental Society, Northern Indiana Dental Society.—ADDRESS: Star Bldg., Terre Haute, Ind.

JAMES LEON WILLIAMS. Born in Concord, Somerset Co., Maine, April 21, 1852. He lived on his father's farm until the age of sixteen. Up to that age his only school education was obtained at the "little red school house," which at that time was a feature of every New England community. He later attended two years at a high school, followed by two or three terms at Oak Grove Seminary. While a student in the latter some one gave him a Chicago paper in which a money prize was offered for the best original poem written by a native American, open to all competitors under twenty-one years of age. He promptly sent in his contribution of about fifty lines on "The Voyage of Life." He was greatly astounded some weeks later to receive the announcement that he had been awarded the first prize, accompanied by a very complimentary prediction as to his future career. He began the study of dentistry in the nineteenth year under a preceptor whom he later succeeded. He had been in practice about six years before he had saved one hundred dollars, and when he had this sum in bank he invested it in a microscope, much to the disgust of his family and friends. At this time Dr. Garretson's "Oral Surgery" took highest rank as a text book in dentistry. He had not been working many months over his microscope before he became convinced that Garretson's theory of the development of the teeth was wrong. After about two years of this microscopic work, he published his first article on the subject of the development of the teeth in "The Dental Cosmos."

Similarly later he wrote a series of articles on Crown and Bridgework, the first which had appeared on this, at that time, new system of prosthetic dentistry. During that time (in 1884) he took the examination of the Baltimore College of Dental Surgery, and received the degree of D. D. S. He later went to England and there qualified himself to practice by taking the degree of L. D. S. from the Royal College of Surgeons of Ireland. Among his writings is a large work under the title of the "Home and Haunts of Shakespeare." He reviewed and thoroughly revised Bodecker's "Anatomy and Pathology of the Teeth." This was followed with a four years' study of the development, formation and pathology of enamel, with the aid of a most complete and perfect outfit for microscopic work. The result of this work was embodied in the papers presented before the Royal Society of Great Britain and the Odontological Society of New York. They have been copied into nearly all the text books dealing with such subjects that have since appeared, and as further recognition of the value of the work, he has been made an honorary member of many of the leading dental societies of the world, including the Odon-tological Society of New York and the Societe Odontologique de France. He was Editor of "The Dentist," published in London, until failing health compelled him to give it up. He has also highly distinguished himself as an artist and oil painter. He has made illustrations for his book "Sicily, Land of the Departed Gods and Old Romance," and outdoor photographic illustrations for Irving's "Legend of Sleepy Hollow."—ADDRESS: Salem, Indiana.
